Sample Book Insights: #1 I start reserving my car in January, when I'm feeling most optimistic about the Giants and least optimistic about the Giants and a new year. I always call Rob, who has his own agency and always manages to get me a discount greater than everyone else's. #2 In France, people are used to lines. They don't understand why Americans are upset when they have to wait in line. I was lost for thirty minutes in the airport, and when I finally found the TT phone, I was directed to Renault, the car rental agency. #3 I pick up the phone and speak with a man who says yes before I can even ask if he speaks English. He takes me to the van, puts my bags in the back, and races to the car rental location. I walk into the Renault office, and the lady there speaks English. #4 I had driven from Renault to the Total station, following the directions on Mapquest. I was going to Senlis because it was only 20 miles away from the highway exit and avoided the Périphérique, a 36-kilometer bypass loop that circles Paris.

The present study investigated differences on the knowledge and use of collocations between French and Japanese learners with regard to: 1) L1 influence; and 2) combinability and transparency influence. The test materials included four categories of the lexical collocations: 1) verb + noun; 2) delexicalised verb + noun; 3) adjective + noun; and 4) adverb + adjective. The two types of tasks, Multiple Choice Question Tasks and Translation Tasks, are performed, and the learner corpora are also investigated in order to examine whether the learners from different L1 backgrounds demonstrate different results. Though L1 influence by both French and Japanese learners was demonstrated, the Japanese learners showed a greater L1 influence in the [adjective] noun] category than the French learners. The investigation also found that L1 influence does not necessarily result in accuracy of the collocations. With regard to the combinability and transparency influence, the results of the two types of tasks followed Kellerman's (1978) remark. However, some contrasted results were also identified in learner corpus investigation. Thus the combinability and transparency influence were not necessarily identified. The results of the present study have a potential to improve teaching/learning of collocations through recognizing the learners' tendencies of learning collocations.

 Susan Orlean weaves a beautiful and insightful tale of the history, purpose, and heart of libraries as seen through the lens of the great Los Angeles library fire of 1986. What does this ZIP Reads Summary Include? - Synopsis of the original book - Chapter-by-chapter summaries - Key takeaways from each chapter - A history of the Los Angeles Central Library - Editorial Review - Background on Susan Orlean About the Original Book: Susan Orlean uses the 1986 Great Fire at the Los Angeles Central Library as the backdrop to explore the history of libraries and librarianship in the United States. In the end, there is no clear resolution about how and why the fire started. However, the author is clear that libraries have endured all types of fires, both physical and metaphorical. Orlean shows the biggest threat to the Los Angeles Library System, like other public library systems, is the threat of irrelevance. For her part, Orlean sees the library as ever-evolving and able to adapt to modern needs rather than succumb to them. Her book is both a history of libraries as well as a love letter to them. DISCLAIMER: This book is intended as a companion to, not a replacement for, The Library Book ZIP Reads is wholly responsible for this content and is not associated with the original author in any way.  Sample Book Insights: #1 The city of Djenné, Mali, was the oldest known urban civilization in Africa outside of Egypt. It was also the most recently discovered example of a major ancient urban civilization. #2 The city of Djenné in Mali was one of the first to trade with the outside world, hundreds of years before Arabs arrived in North Africa. It thrived by trading fish, grains, and copper and other metals with places hundreds of miles away. #3 The Ghana Empire was ruled by a Muslim elite, but the capital city was located six miles away from another capital city that was still honoring older, ancestral religions. This allowed the empire to benefit from both lucrative trade and peaceful relations with the Berbers. #4 The gold that flowed out of the Sudan played a crucial role in the Arab golden age, a period of explosive growth and political expansion that began around 750 CE and extended until the Mongol invasions of the thirteenth century.

 Sample Book Insights: #1 The Second Language Research Forum is a gathering of linguists at the University of Maryland, who seem to be unable to understand the importance of data. They only hear about the success stories of adults in India who have acquired near-native English proficiency, without any mention of the thousands of adults who will never achieve native proficiency. #2 The speakers at the conference seemed overly focused on the issue of age and how late you can start learning a new language, but I found that even in the United States, a New Yorker sounds different from a Californian. #3 The field of applied linguistics has developed a strong theoretical basis over the last thirty years, but has not produced any practical results. I asked Byrnes if she had any success teaching German to students who didn't know a word of German at the beginning of their freshman year, and she said yes. #4 I was told that there were no materials available for adults to learn French, but that I could learn woodworking and math. I was convinced, but not completely.

 Sample Book Insights: #1 I have always lived in jeans, since I was a child. I loved them because they were playful and experimental. I would take as many things as possible from my granddad's denim factory. I wanted to have as many looks as possible at my disposal. #2 I had a love of fashion, and I used it to express myself. I was not a headstrong or outgoing child, so I used clothes to show the world who I was. I was always polite and kind, but when it came to getting my own way, I knew how to manipulate the situation. #3 I had a fascination with fashion from
