Davis Carter is an easy-going, take-it-as-it-comes live-aboard sailor, hanging out in Miami's Dinner Key Marina on his wooden sailboat, the "Zen Mountain". A good guy who's made a really bad mistake. This mistake that has put him in possession of something he'd rather not have, something that a powerful narcotics smuggling operation will do anything to get back. Seventeen-year-old Gary Pietrosanto has made a lot of bad choices in his life. Petty theft. Vandalism. Attempted rape. Now he and his punk friends have gone a little too far and half the men in their coastal Mississippi hometown are after them with shotguns and baseball bats. Rather than face the music, Gary and his best friend, Jo-Jo, head out for the bright lights of Miami. Here, Gary makes a wrong move, a decisive mistake that will change his life forever: he stows away on Davis' sailboat just as Davis is hauling in anchors and raising sails to flee the U. S., one step ahead of the smugglers. Across the brilliant turquoise waters, amid the countless sun-bleached islands of the Bahamas, this unwilling duo plays hide-and-seek with the team of gunmen on their track. In the face of storms and shipwreck, hunger and thirst, fickle winds and treacherous currents, Davis and Gary must evade the killers in a game where one wrong move can cost them their lives.
