 Called "one of the best critiques of current mathematics education" by Keith Devlin, A Mathematician's Lament by Paul Lockhart reveals math to be a creative art form on par with painting, poetry, and sculpture, and rejects the standard anxiety-producing teaching methods used in most schools today.

 A Mathematician's Lament | Bellevue Literary Press
 A mathematician's lament (2002) is an article from Paul Lockhart, a first-class research mathematician and teacher at Saint Ann's School in Brooklyn, New York. Not only is it a critique of current K-12 mathematics education in the United States, but it's also a reminder that mathematics are also and above all an art, like music or beaux-arts.
