This volume discusses a variety of aspects of cross-curricular language learning and teaching. It highlights the multidimensional character of language classes conducted at different educational levels, from pre-school to the university level, and discusses several important issues from a theoretical perspective, providing certain practical solutions and implications to the enumerated problems. The material of the book is divided into four parts, essentially reflecting the main areas of interest here. These parts deal with such notions as language learning and teaching; media in foreign language didactics; art and literature in language education; and (inter-)culturality and cross-curricularity in language learning and teaching. The book will be particularly useful to teacher-practitioners and scholars interested in various forms of integrating the content of different school subjects in language education.

It is common practice to assume that business practices are universally similar.
Business and social
attitudes to corruption,
however, vary
according to the wide variety of cultural

norms across the
countries of the world.
International business
involves complex,
ethically challenging,
and sometimes
threatening, dilemmas
that can involve
political and personal agendas. Corruption in International Business
presents a broad range of perspectives on how corruption can be defined; the
responsibilities of those working for publicly traded companies to their shareholders; and
the positive influences that corporations can have upon combating international corruption. The authors differentiate between public and private sector corruption and
explore the implications of both, as well as methods for qualifying and quantifying corruption

and the challenges facing policy makers, legal systems, corporations, and NGOs, as they seek to mitigate the effects of corruption and enable cultural and social change.
