The outbreak of corona virus (COVID-19) pandemic has no doubt, occasioned an unprecedented global human and economic crisis. The resultant lockdown and abrupt shutdown of major economic activities in the world have apparently given rise to several business disruptions and economic losses across the world including Nigeria. According to Kristalina Georgieva, Managing Director of International Monetary Fund (IMF), the economic effect of the pandemic would result in "a recession at least as bad as during the Global Financial Crisis or worse", and this is because the world is currently experiencing the most difficult economic situation since World War-II. The consequence of the foregoing crisis is that many organizations would be seeking for ways to ameliorate the effect of the pandemic on their businesses. One of the options open to some businesses is to have recourse to their insurance policies, and the most significant insurance coverage which business owners would resort to, is the business interruption insurance coverage. This write up examines the concept of business interruption coverage; the extent which such insurance claims may be potent for the insured business owners in the face of the recent pandemic, and the extent of its viability in the light of the Nigerian insurance legal framework.

 The Nat. Flood Insur. Program (NFIP) currently has 5.6 million policyholders that are insured for $1.1 trillion. The program collects $2.9 billion in annual premiums. As of Jan. 2009, NFIP owed $19.2 billion to the U.S. Treasury, primarily as a result of loans that the program received to pay claims from the 2005 hurricane season. This is a briefing on: (1) the percentage and geographic distribution of policyholders that purchase the max. NFIP coverage; (2) the availability of private commercial and residential flood insur.; (3) the potential effect of adding bus. interruption coverage to commercial flood insur., particularly for small and medium-sized bus.; and (4) the challenges and issues surrounding the potential creation of an NFIP loss fund. Twenty years ago, few certified public accountants or economists offered litigation-related services; now, a large number devote much of their practice to this area. To be litigation service practitioners and accountants need to learn or enhance their litigation skills, including the fine points of their roles in trial preparation and testimony presentation, testimony presentation, deposition, direct examination, cross examination, understanding Sarbanes-Oxley rulings, and fraud investigations.

A Guide to Contemporary Nigerian Practice

This book will appeal to buyers of insurance whilst also serving as a refresher to insurance students and practitioners across all arms of the insurance market. The intention is to simplify as much as possible the core concepts at the heart of business interruption underwriting and claims. The book challenges the norms in the Nigerian market whilst drawing on practice and emerging issues in other markets. As the book was being finalized, Covid-19 (coronavirus) became a topical issue not just in terms of the health emergencies but the interruption caused by the global lockdown. It became necessary to begin a conversation on this uncharted territory in the final chapter of the book. The views expressed in this chapter are therefore not definitive.
