Islam for children
Darussalam

This book is based not only on years of specialised study in this field but also reflects my own personal experiences in a family filled with children over 30 years of married life. I was brought up in a conservative and deeply religious family in the Indian subcontinent. I had my own turbulent experiences of helping my wife raise our own six children, initially in a simple Asian/African community in Kenya, and later in the complex multicultural environment of Britain. Through the progress of my progeny from school to university, I learned of the British educational system, from the egalitarian approach of modern comprehensive schools, an idealistic concept often defeated by lack of funding, to the elitist and successful private sector which insists on rigorous discipline, tradition and high academic achievement. Life in Britain opens the door to a myriad of contrasts in value systems, customs, races and beliefs. The Muslim discovers that his Islamic values and faith are not only alien to the dominant western culture throughout the society, but that the two insist on locking horns in battle. This struggle of two opposing yet equally dogmatic belief systems engulfs and threatens to drown the Muslims. Some fortunate ones swim through the ocean of parenthood with smiling faces, having successfully negotiated the obstacles thrown their way. They smile because not only have they survived the test with their own faith and values intact, but have also succeeded in transmitting their beliefs and norms to their children. Imagine the content and sense of achievement

 parents must
 feel when observing
 their adult
 children who
 too share the
 same love and
 devotion to
 the Mosque,
 the Quran and
 the many Islamic
 precepts. In a
 world
 obsessed with
 materialism
 and denial of God, this is
 truly a great
 achievement.
 Unhappily
 there are
 many more
 parents who flounder and
 sink, who do
 not share this
 sense of
 achievement
 and jubilation,
 and who weep

with sorrow
 and failure
 when observing
 their own
 offspring:
 aged parents
 confronted
 with the
 dreadful
 spectacle of
 their
 indecently
 dressed
 daughter
 going to the
 pub with her
 arms around
 her current boyfriend, or
 their beloved
 son who buys
 the attentions
 of street
 women and
 even fathers
 illegitimate
 children.
 These parents
 feel as if the
 earth is
 dropping from

under their
 feet and they are being
 swallowed by
 quicksand,
 powerless and
 helpless. They wish they
 could have a
 second
 chance at
 raising their children but
 there is never
 a second chance. This small booklet
 is presented
 to those
 young men
 and women
 beginning the
 long journey
 of parenthood,
 in the hope
 that they may
 never shed
 the tears of
 the defeated.
*100 Hadiths
 for Children*
 Islam places

great emphasis on the child, right from infancy to the age of puberty. The reason for this is to prepare him to become a good member of the community. Children learn more by example than by words. Telling our children what to do and not showing them by a good example is a hypocritical act and drives children to confusion and away from us. It is for this reason we are presenting this booklet as a guideline for those parents who are concerned about their present and future offspring My Journey in Ramadan this perfect islamic book explain 40 hadiths with 40 stories. A Treasury of Islamic Values for Children (Goodword)

New Muslims and children are eager to know the sayings of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him). To fulfill this requirement I have collected
