Vocational Counselling and Guidance in the Federal Republic of Germany Astitva Prakashan In order for students to compete in today's global economy, our schools need to help them develop better cognitive and technological skills. School counselors have an enormous impact on students' achievement and their success in their post-secondary education, yet initiatives to improve student outcomes often overlook them. Fitzpatrick and Costantini present their own action-based curriculum for high school counselors that will meet the needs of 21st century students, helping to foster their growth and ambition and actively engage them in learning what they need to succeed beyond high school. Important steps covered in this curriculum include Making the transition to ninth grade successful Using technology in the advising process, such as online resources for college and career research, assessing interests, and structuring advising sessions Preparing for standardized testing and using it to motivate students about the college application process Assisting students in researching careers and colleges, making the most of college visits, applying for college, and writing the application essay Equally important, the book focuses on the counselor and his or her role as an advocate and leader for students and details running a guidance office, working with parents, and writing Secondary School Reports. A party of vocational educators from the United Kingdom (UK) traveled to the Federal Republic of Germany (FRG) to observe the nature and scope of vocational counseling and guidance in that country. During their study, the observers focused their attention on the problems of the transition from school to working life; arbeitslehre, or education about work that typically takes place at the secondary level; vocational orientation, counseling, and placement; special needs; and questions about national and cultural differences between the UK and FRG. The observers found that vocational counseling and guidance services in the FRG are quite effective. They attributed this effectiveness to various factors, including the clear political commitment at all levels to the coordination and provision of education and training, the close coordination of employees and educators, and the threat of a training levy to enforce clearly agreed objectives. Based on these observations, the investigators made recommendations calling for the establishment of a national body to bring together employers, unions, educational administrators, and teachers to establish training aims and objectives as well as proposals for their implementation. (Appendixes to this report include discussions of the educational system in the FRG and cooperation among schools and vocational guidance services there.) (MN) Counseling Technics in College and Secondary School Routledge Guidance And Counselling In Colleges And Universities Sterling Publishers Pvt.
