DEFRA's belated proposals to tackle irresponsible dog ownership are too limited. Since 2007 dogs have killed seven people, including five children, in private homes. The NHS also spends over £3 million annually treating dog attack injuries. Some eight assistance dogs a month, and thousands of livestock annually, are attacked by dogs. The Home Office approach to tackling antisocial behaviour is too simplistic; and fails to reflect the impact that poor breeding and training by irresponsible owners can have on a dog's behaviour. New rules should give enforcement officers more effective powers, including Dog Control Notices, to prevent dog-related antisocial behaviour. Local authorities need to devote more resources to the effective management of stray dogs. MPs call for changes in the legislation to give powers to extend the banned list to include other dogs with particularly aggressive characteristics. At the same time, those tasked to enforce legislation should have the discretion to neuter rather than destroy a banned animal where a particular dog poses no threat. The Advisory Council on Welfare Issues of Dog Breeding should be given a formal regulatory role to enforce standards. Any breeder producing more than two litters per year should be licensed and subject to welfare checks. The Kennel Club should stop registering puppies from breeders not compliant with its own Assured Breeder Scheme. It should also commission an independent annual review of Breed Standards led by vets to eliminate health problems linked to breeding for exaggerated characteristics. Lastly, MPs call on websites advertising pets to develop a voluntary Code of Practice

There are no "secrets" in the breeding of fine dogs. Nature's laws, basic truths, are like the Ten Commandments, and bear repeating-the often the better. The receipt for success in the science of reproduction is both simple and complex but it can be summed up in a little word: SELECTION is the secret of breeding fine dogs-selection based on knowledge. A great winner is no "accident." Behind each great dog are a planned breeding program and a continuity of purpose extending over many years, by the dog's immediate breeder of a succession of breeders. Long ago people assumed that ill luck and good fortune were based upon chance. Science has narrowed the gap-if one does not depend entirely upon Lady Luck. Nature is all-powerful but science has proved that nature can be guided, and controlled; that individuals traits in a living machine can be focused, and fixed. Thinking back, I recall a poem that my parents used to quote to us children. (I am not sure I have it just right.) If, of all sad words of tongue and pen, the saddest are, "It might have been." "Sadder are these we daily see. It is, but it ought not to be." But of all glad words of prose and rhyme, the gladdest are, "There still is time." Nothing could be more appropriate than this when we consider the little dogs which "hadn't ought to be, "but there is "still time" for breeders to take an inventory of their breeding programs, to check where they've been, how long they've been there, and the direction in which they are going.

Dog Breeder's Professional Secrets Canine Handbooks

Are you tired of searching online, trying to pick out that one special puppy without a clue of where to turn? Was the last puppy you purchased nothing like the puppy the breeder promised you he or she would be, and you want to make sure your next puppy is? Have you been online for days, and all you see are online pet shops offering you quick sales with no personalization behind their brand? Do you want to purchase a puppy that will only weigh 3 pounds and need to know what to look for to ensure you are not deceived by these sellers that appear to be less than honorable? Did the last puppy you purchased die after spending $1,500 at the vet to try to save her. Do you want to make sure that never happens to your family or your new puppy again? If the answer to any of these questions is yes, reading a copy of Jeannie's book, "That's Not a Teacup" is exactly what you need. Jeannie's book will give you a power packed punch of ammunition to guide you in the direction that not only ensures you bring home the right puppy, but also protects all dogs from the abuse of puppy mills. Buying a puppy is a lot more involved than just finding the right puppy; which is hard enough in itself. It is also about making sure you find a breeder that loves the ancestors of your new family member. If your breeder is only in it for a profit, your alleged perfect puppy, might only be in your family a few short months or years. Since dogs live very short lives, it is important to make sure the genetics behind your puppy are solid. In order to help you achieve this goal, it is imperative you find the right breeder; they are out there, you just need to take the time to find them. Jeannie has been breeding dogs for 24 years, and she knows from experience what to look for. Jeannie also has a Bachelor in Health Science Education degree from the University of Florida, and she knows how to ensure a puppy has sound genetics. She will help you spot a great breeder and a puppy mill as well. Her book also offers solutions to help those that cannot afford to pay the price for a well-bred dog and does not want to contribute to the abuse of puppy mills. There are healthy $500 teacups out there. You just have to know how to find them. There are also $3,000 fakes available, in abundance. Jeannie's book is easy to follow and enjoyable to read. If you are ready to make that investment for your new family member, "That's Not a Teacup" needs to be the first step you take. Rushing into your decision is great for the breeder, but probably not for you. The dog breeding world is one of the most misleading and cruel markets in the world. Cute little puppies are dressed up and used as pawns for deception. Unscrupulous breeders effortlessly play on the consumers emotions with the aid of adorable little puppies, as the consumer is often times mourning the recent loss of a beloved dog. Armed with the knowledge Jeannie provides, consumers no longer have to resort to unknowingly contributing to the horrendous abuse of dogs and cats who suffer in the hands of some of societies worst individuals. If anything, learn from her for the sake of all those that are suffering right now, and need your help. If you want to do the right thing, but are clueless, "That's Not a Teacup" is the book for you. If you simply love reading interesting books about dogs, "That's Not a Teacup" offers readers an insightful perspective on what it is like to be a dog breeder in a world of heartless competition. This book is a must read for all dog lovers. How to Make a Puppy! Hachette UK

A dog breeding business is not a business for everyone; however, if you know a lot about a certain breed and have the desire to turn your interest in canines into a full-time and long-time pursuit, a dog breeding business may be the best opportunity for you. Dog breeding will absolutely be personally and financially rewarding but does require a lot of patience, hard work, knowledge and commitment, but if you are up for the challenge then shoot for the gold! Breeding is a continual learning process; thus, it is highly recommended that you research on the appearance, history, temperament, feeding habits, and other important information on your chosen breed beforehand. You should also research on the grooming and training needs for your breed. Read on and learn the important steps to take when planning to start up a dog breeding business.

Step 1: Know the requirements It is important to know the standard requirements for you breed if you plan on the dog being a member of a professional dog breeding community like the American Kennel Club (AKC). Another important thing to keep up with when starting a dog breeding business is the breed trends. You should also join and participate in local dog breeders associations to start a good relationship in the dog breeding industry as well as to keep up with the latest dog breeding news and information. A good idea also is to, have your dog participate in competitions which will allow you to ask a higher price for your dogs puppies.

Step 2: Dog Evaluation Before purchasing dogs for the breeding purpose, make sure they have undergone a thorough and careful evaluation. Before you start training and breeding you must know everything about the dog. This will help you prevent problems along the breeding line.

Step 3: Good record keeping You need to always have the following dog records and always keep them updated: proof of registration, medical history and any other document on the dog. A customer may ask you for these documents or others to get a proof of pedigree. A dog Registering a kennel that only has 2 or 3 dogs is not required in most cases. If you want, you can name your kennel and register your chosen name with the American Kennel Club (AKC). Registering with the AKC is a great way or advertising your dog breeding business. The above mentioned steps are just the basic of starting up a business in dog breeding but of course, you also need to learn how to provide an ample amount of care to your female dogs while they are pregnant. Be sure you are prepared for the birth process and that you will do the necessary things. Now you should be ready to kick start your business! I wish you a successful dog breeding business, by the time you finish reading this manual, you would be over-excited to start the business.
